

Finishing for seat cover fabrics for trains

Stain-repellant finish

Key advantages

The Lantal stain-repellant finish for seat cover fabrics has the following compelling advantages:

- The seat cover fabric is resistant to dirt, moisture, graffiti-type color smears, all kinds of liquids, and compression points
- Stains can be quickly removed
- Improved hygienic properties
- Reduced cleaning effort due to low moisture absorption
- Reduced need of maintenance
- Passenger seating comfort is preserved
- The seat cover fabric remains breathable despite the finish

Specifications

Application

The stain-repellant finish can be applied to Lantal seat cover fabrics in velvet standard qualities for trains.

The stain-repellant finish and the hygienic finish cannot be applied together to velvet seat cover fabrics. Only one of the two finishings can be used.

On seat cover fabrics in flat weaves, neither of the two finishings can be used.

Finishing process

The stain-repellant property of the seat cover fabric is achieved by impregnation with a fluorocarbon finish.

The finish is ecologically sound and unobjectionable.

The stain-repellant finish for seat cover fabrics can be applied only to yardage, not to cut and sewn parts.

Cleaning notes and care

Liquid spillages on seat covers are no longer a problem. With the Lantal stain-repellant finish, liquids drip off the velvet and can be wiped off with minimum effort. The stain-repellant finish also causes soft drinks and alcoholic beverages to drip off.

The stain-repellent effect may diminish over time due to daily fabric wear, wet cleaning, and the use of graffiti removers.

The finish cannot be refreshed on cut and sewn parts.

Safety

Lantal velvet seat cover fabrics with the stain-repellant finish are flame-resistant and comply with the standards and specifications of EN 45545-2 / DIN 5510-2 / NF F16-101.
